WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Monday, Nov. 11—Hostill- Gave Him ties along the American front ended with a crash of cannon.

The early forenoon had been marked by a falling off in fire all along the line, but an increasing bombardment stomach and hver troubles whom I wish points stimulated the line and tell what Chamberlain's Writes Miss Nora G. Hagerty, of Lincoln, in points stimulated the Americans to a quick retort. From their positions north of Stenay to southeast of the town, the Americans began to bombard fixed targets. The firing reached a volume almost equivalent to a barrage.

Two minutes before 11 o'clock the firing dwindled, the last shells shricking over No Man's Land precisely on

There was little celebration on the front line, where American routine was scarcely disturbed over the cessation of hostilities. In the areas behind i'e battle zone there were celebrations today on all sides. Here and there there were little outbursts of cheering, but even those instances were not on the immediate front. When news of the ending of hostilities arrived/at a certain aviation camp, the commander, who had instructed his men the night before to make a reconnaissance, cancelled his orders and informed his flyers that they would not be allowed to cross the German lines. The chief of artillery had given preliminary instructions that the guns should stop firing, but he cancelled the orders through the morning, when indignant divisional and brigade commanders said the Germans should be punished for the gas attacks on Mouzzy and other places. It was in the gray light of early morning that orders for the cessation of hostilities were sent out to divisional chiefs and the artiflery and avi ation commanders. Each commander was called to the telephone and the general army order read to him.
